1. Aims

1.1 General Aims

To provide students with opportunities to demonstrate, and receive academic credit for, the knowledge and skills appropriate to postgraduate study in their chosen programme/discipline and to undertake a substantial piece of independent work at the Master's stage.

1.2 Educational Aims

All approved programmes within the scheme must demonstrate the following:

1.2.1 The development, to the level required for a postgraduate award, of a body of knowledge and skills appropriate to the area of study and reflecting current developments in that area.

1.2.2 The development, to the level expected of a postgraduate award of students' intellectual and creative powers; their cultural awareness; their understanding and judgement; their problem solving skills; their ability to communicate; their understanding and application of research skills; their ability to see relationships within what they have learned; their ability to perceive the ethical implications of their subject of study; and their ability to perceive their area of study in a broader perspective.

1.2.3 Every programme of study approved within the scheme must demonstrate as appropriate the progressive achievement of these aims, and a more specialised and focused subject matter than would be found in an undergraduate programme.

1.2.4 Each student's programme of study must stimulate an inquiring, analytical and creative approach, encourage independent judgement and critical self-awareness.

2 Definition
